2. Two years ago, Ruben Gomez and his sons, Andy, 17, and Rudy, 15, arrived in Yuma, AZ. The family has a long history of moves for seasonal agricultural work. They moved from California to obtain seasonal employment picking lettuce but could not find work due to a drought that had limited the field work available. Mr. Gomez, instead, found temporary work at a local tire shop. He enrolled Andy and Rudy in school shortly after they arrived. One year later, Ruben and his sons were hired by a farmer to fertilize cotton.

5. A worker moved from Florida to Georgia, with his wife and four school-aged children, to harvest onions. He was especially excited to move to Vidalia because his older brother and his family live there as well. He knew that his children were looking forward to spending time with their cousins. Once the harvest is over, both families will travel together to Mexico and spend the holidays together. The worker began work the day after the family arrived, about a month ago.

6. A family of five (mother, father, and their children ages 20, 17, and 16) resides in Washington state. In April 2013, the parents needed to return to Mexico, at which time they left their three children in the care of their eldest child, Jose. He took his siblings to Idaho. Although Jose never finished high school, he works at a cattle ranch to support himself and his siblings while they attend school in Idaho.

8. In March of this year, the Babenko family moved from Carnation, WA, to work at a dairy farm near Silverton, OR. The dairy farm owner said that the work was expected to last five months. The parents will be feeding and milking cows, cleaning stalls and other duties. The family typically moves throughout the Northwest to do this type of work. The Babenkos take their three children, Dmitry, 18, Denis, 14, and Alexandra, 10, with them when they move. The parents enrolled Denis and Alexandra in school. Dmitry worked with his parents on the farm.
